

Who is a matriculated graduate student?

A matriculated student is one who is both admitted and enrolled in a graduate program of study leading to a degree or teaching license including an endorsement, certificate, or authorization at Western Oregon University. A graduate student's "matriculation term" is the first term in which a graduate student is both admitted and enrolled at WOU.

What is the matriculation fee?

The matriculation fee is used to fund graduate student orientation and other activities that support graduate students.

How much is the fee?

The matriculation fee is a one-time fee of $205.

If a graduate student does a complete withdrawal in their matriculation term, will they be assessed the fee?

Students who withdraw on the first day of classes or after will be assessed the matriculation fee. Those students who do a complete withdrawal from WOU before the first day of classes, will NOT be assessed the fee.

Will students pay the fee again if they move from the undergraduate to graduate level studies at WOU?

Yes, students will be assessed a matriculation fee for graduate level studies at WOU if they are an admitted graduate student and enrolled in a program of study leading to a degree or teaching license including an endorsement, certificate, or authorization.

Do re-enrolling students pay the matriculation fee?

Previously matriculated students who re-enroll/re-register do not pay a matriculation fee, regardless of their actual matriculation term. Returning students that were not admitted to the graduate programs before will be charged the matriculation fee.
